1. A Helping Horn
A challenging story to see and to tell.
2. Drained Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool, Washington D.C.
The sky is not your friend here, a closer shot with less sky and less foreground could still get the story across
3. Eight second ride
Nice sense of place. The riders' shoes are the best part of this action.
4. Entangled
this is a sad but realistic story. Up close like this shows us the struggle and the dilemma.
5. FourBigEyesofWonder
Waiting for the owl to turn it's head, including just the girls eyes, everything came together to tell this story and the title is perfect
6. GirlsWatchOwl
interesting to be this close. Nice ears on the owl
7. Liftoff at Albuquerque Balloon Festival, New Mexico
Liftoff usually includes lots of balloons lifting off at once. Getting down lower and closer would help tell this story.
8. Mom&Dad
Nice composition. There is a wonderful nature story here.
9. OwlWatchesGirl
For me, the title subjects both need to be in sharp focus.
10. Preparing the balloon for flight at the Albuquerque Balloon Festival, New Mexico getting down low would improve the impact of this story.

11. ReleasedToFreedom

Backing up and including the legs and the restraint that was released would make this a more meaningful story.

12. rodeo clown

getting down lower might have provided a brighter, clearer image of the clowns face and his expression thus improving the impact of the story.

13. Spectators at the Albuquerque Balloon Festival, New Mexico.

placing the spectators in a larger space in the image would allow us to focus on them since they are the title of the story.

14. Too close

Title and image match. Nice separation between the horns and the cowboy. Including the background mustard and ketchup helps show a sense of place. Great story.
